

Two interesting cases of unusual presentation of severe PET, challenge and dilemma in diagnosis and management

Arafa A, Boregowda G, Stankeviciene I
Epsom and St Helier Hospital, London, United Kingdom

Objective

To present two interesting cases of severe pre-eclampsia which we have managed recently in our unit and highlight the challenges we face in management of these cases.

Methods

Patients clinical records, HDU and A&E records.

Results

To follow.

Conclusion

Postnatal pre-eclampsia and atypical HELLP presentation are challenging cases to recognise and treat. However, multidisciplinary management, early recognition and prompt treatment is the key factor for successful management.
